

Connecticut Water Steps Up to Help Shepard Hill Elementary School

CLINTON, CONNECTICUT, July 5, 2018 –Connecticut Water takes great pride in our partnerships with the local communities we serve. Recently our employees stepped up to assist Shepard Hill Elementary School in Plainfield, CT and demonstrated their commitment to the community.

The elementary school experienced a water pump failure which could have meant a day without classes for students. However, Connecticut Water employee, Melissa Wilcox, learned of the issue and stepped into action.

With the assistance of fellow employees, she was able to work with staff to get a water tanker brought to the school and hooked up so that the children didn't miss school and field day could go on as planned.

William L. Nagel, Principal of Shepard Hill Elementary School stated, "I would like to thank your staff for all the time and help they provided to Shepard Hill Elementary School. We had a backup water pump blow during the power surge. Melissa Wilcox and several others from your company went above and beyond to ensure that we were able to have water service available to our staff and students. They are a great community partner."

Thank you to our employees Melissa, Jim Connors and Justin Baker for their dedication to the community both on and off the job.

Connecticut Water serves more than 93,000 customers, or a population of 300,000, in over 59 communities throughout the state of Connecticut. For more information, visit: www.CTWater.com.
